Please see email below from Becky Joyce of San Juan County. She's interested in both a communication initiative to those in San Juan County who may not be accessing traditional media outlets; as well as possibly some limited sampling of GW wells along Cement Creek. Since our deadline has passed for sampling requests, I thought her best path forward at this time was to speak with you to see what opportunities for collaboration exist. I also encouraged her to reach out to Cynthia Peterson as EPA's long-term liaison and Community Involvement Coordinator for the Upper Animas Mining District.

No specific action is required, as I assume Becky will reach out to you directly when she's ready, so this is more for situational awareness.

Becky:

It was a pleasure speaking with you about potential outreach to residents of San Juan County. Your desire to reach out to those who might not be accessing traditional media is an excellent idea and I thought the attached documents might help in that effort.

Both docs are now a bit dated, however, they offer good examples of explaining the situation in an easily understandable manner and either could be posted around town for those who may need alternatives to the local press. I thought you might be able to update these and then place them in areas where residents are likely to see them, such as in the grocery store, library, post office, and other places frequented by County residents.

I've also cc'ed Cynthia Peterson, the EPA Community Involvement Coordinator for the Upper Animas Mining District, and included her contact information below. Cynthia will be in the area on a regular basis and, when you get ready to issue your communication pieces, can help get you the most up-to-date information on efforts related to the Gold King Mine release.
